

The diagram illustrates the layout requirements for a double-page spread. It features a central gutter where two pages meet. Each page is divided into three vertical sections by two green lines (fold lines). A red line (cut line) is positioned further out on each page, and a blue line (safety line) is positioned between the fold lines and the cut lines. Arrows point from the text labels to their respective lines. At the bottom, the finished and bleed sizes are specified.
