

The diagram shows a rectangular print layout with three main lines: a central vertical green line, two horizontal blue lines, and two diagonal red lines. The red lines are at the top corners, meeting at the center. The blue lines are horizontal, one above and one below the center. The green line is vertical, running through the center. Arrows point from the text labels to their respective lines. A horizontal arrow points from the left edge to the left blue line, and another points from the right blue line to the right edge. A horizontal arrow points from the right green line to the right edge. A vertical arrow points from the top red line to the top edge. A horizontal arrow points from the right green line to the right edge. A horizontal arrow points from the right green line to the right edge.
